■ Raiders

THE Raiders joined more than 500 children from the ACT region on Tuesday for the Macquarie Sports Super Clinic at Northbourne Oval in Braddon. Through the 'Kids to Kangaroos' program, Macquarie Sports aims to provide children with the opportunity to meet and learn new football skills from their sporting heroes. Raiders captain Alan Tongue said: "These types of clinics are a great way to promote our sport and the players really enjoy getting out and teaching skills to the kids who come along. It's not every day these children get the chance to come and meet NRL players either so it's a real buzz for them too."

■ Wests Tigers

STUDENTS from Anson Street School in Orange were special guests of the Wests Tigers for their season-opener against Canberra on Monday night. Anson St is a school for students with disabilities and special needs and for many it was the first time they'd seen an NRL game. Teacher Suzie Grant said the students said the Tigers victory made the bus trip home a lot of fun.

■ Bulldogs

JARRAD Hickey and Brad Morrin accompanied Camp Quality to Mary MacKillop Primary in South Penrith last Friday for their McDonald's Camp Quality Puppet program. The 45-minute program creates an imaginary world, which helps children make sense of the real world while addressing various aspects of cancer treatment. The mother of a child who lost his father three weeks ago said: "The attention shown by Jarrad and Brad was amazing, above and beyond any of my expectations."
